

“Dedicated to Teaching”

Reflection:

My Grandmother, Frances, and her work is the focus of my photograph. She is at home, working on report cards for her third grade class. Fran teaches in Milwaukee’s inner city, for MPS. She is eighty years old. Or, maybe, eighty years experienced. She shares her life experiences with the children she works with. Even now, she cannot dream of retiring. Teaching is her life. Like many others who reach retirement age, Fran has decided to keep working. Many of the older citizens in our country are deciding to work well past the typical age of retirement. We must realize that aging is not meant to make us incapable of doing things we love.
